

Please find below 7 questions (#2 consists of 4 questions). I expect you to answer between 3 and 5 of them and you don't get more credit for answering more. I expect roughly 1000 words total, about twice as many words as you see typed on this piece of paper. If I can't read what you write, I'll scan it and send it to you and you can type it for me and send it back.

You will be judged not on what your answer is, but how you support it with material from the class. But you do have to address the question that is asked.

1. Please describe a co-designed project focused on something you'd like to change, improve, remove in your home town. Who would the stakeholders be to the project and how should you be with each stakeholder?
2. We read the epilogue for Ferguson's The Anti-Politics Machine. It was difficult to read but provided many important ideas. The title of the epilogue is "what is to be done?" but Ferguson goes on to further question us: "by whom?" and goes on to discuss the differing interests of many different entities. In the following questions, state what we've learned about what each entity might do, and what you might or might not rely on each group for. You needn't refer to Ferguson or even have read it to answer these questions.
 - 2a) There are federal and local government agents and agencies. What are they doing, and if one wants to help the poor in their region, how might one work with them?
 - 2b) There are the poor people themselves. What are they doing, and if we want to help them, what role might they play in development efforts?
 - 2c) There are well meaning Americans who want to help as they dedicate themselves to making a good living and raising a prosperous family in the USA. What can they do, and how might one interact with them?
 - 2d) There are those that wish to dedicate their lives to promoting equity and helping the poor either individually, in a nonprofit or government organization. What can they do and how might one guide them?
3. We had several speakers: The student group that went to Uganda summer 2016 (Maddi, Ian, Pablo, Omar), Bhoj Rai (US Peace Corps Recruiter), Daniel Weins of Journeyman International, Jim Keese (improved stoves in Peru), Peter Teller (AID Africa), Roger Burton (former international business consultant), Amy Degenkolg (PostPartum Hemorrhage mitigation) and probably way way too much of Pete. Pick one or two of these speakers and describe their development model, and using information from the class, describe why this development model works well or doesn't, or why you agree or don't agree.
4. "If you give a man a fish, you feed him for a day; if you teach a man to fish, you feed him for a lifetime." Comment on this any way you like. When have we seen someone "give a man a fish" or "teach a man to fish" and how has it worked? Do you agree with either one or the other, both or neither? What's your perspective?
